

Prophet Muhammad as the Exalted Ruler of Arabian Peninsula

The book entitled Prophet Muhammad as the Exalted Ruler of Arabian Peninsula is one of the most pioneering books since little work has been done about the Holy Prophet as a unique and an exemplary ruler. Only a few people know that despite being the Mighty Ruler of whole of Southern Arabia he had voluntarily set for himself sublime and superhuman aims which were not set by any king or monarch anywhere in the world. Human records reveal that no emperor or ruler ever undertook a task so far beyond human power with such feeble means as he did. With greatness of purpose, smallness of means and astonishing results he created such a lasting revolution in the galleries of governing powers which was not seen before. He set high standards for fighting wars, followed exemplary etiquettes in meeting envoys, adopted humble style in writing letters to kings and monarchs, remained faithful in fulfilling the conditions of treaties, and pursued a simplistic lifestyle while justly, truthfully and equitably governing people. Despite being a magnificent and most powerful ruler, he lived in a thatched house, built of stones and adobe bricks; wore a simple turban, coarse shirt and patched trousers and ate dates and barley breads. He mended his own dress, stitched his own clothes and did his household work himself. He sat on a mat supported by a leather pillow filled with fibers and used simple utensils and a pot for performing ablution. He did not take any state help though many a time fire did not light in his house and he had to sleep hungry and very often he had to face dark nights due to paucity of the burning oil. He wore no crown, had no throne, no courtiers, no fort and fortresses, no kingly robes and no glamorous paraphernalia. He ruled from the mudded floor of the Mosque and when he died, his august body was shrouded in three white sahooli cotton clothes which had neither head cover nor casing. This unique ruler influenced the course of human history so much that historians pronounced him as the greatest man of all times. When he died in 632 he was the undisputed and the most effective ruler of Arabian Peninsula. He was not only a most influential, remarkable and exceptional genius of all times but a rare phenomenon on earth, walking in flesh and blood, and having maximum impact through ages.
