

Must Loathe Norcross

When it comes to love, there's no such thing as traveling light. Born wealthy and ambitious, Grady once worked hard and played hard—so hard, it brought him to the brink of ruin. Now, after a five-year retreat into the contemplative life, he's dipping a toe back into the real world. Assigned to write a series of articles about Connecticut valleys and small towns, Grady checks into a local hotel. And meets a bellhop who seems determined to show him around...and maybe indulge in a more intimate tour later on. When Josh's boss half-jokingly suggests he get on a first-name basis with the writer who could make or break their town's reputation, Josh jumps at the chance. He dreams of seeing the world, but the man he thought might be his ticket out turns out to be less influential—and more attractive—than he expected. Together they uncover a strange plot to detour Norcross's tourist dollars, a plot that leaves Grady bruised and angry. Now they'll have to decide how far they'll go to save the town...and how far they'll fall for each other. Warning: Steaming-hot room service, delivered by a cute bellboy in uniform. Stolen towels will not be tolerated, but stolen hearts? Help yourself!
