

Travels of John Davis in the United States of America, 1798 to 1802, Vol. 1 (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from Travels of John Davis in the United States of America, 1798 to 1802, Vol. 1 The early writers on the United States of America fared hard at the hands of the critics, especially of the English reviewers. One of Brissots home biographers styles him a mediocre writer, monotonous and verbose; while Due de La Rochefoucauld-Liancourt - poor man, come hither to rid him of life weariness - is denied imagination and the artistic sense. Isaac Weld, the Irishman, who is credited with the laudable wish to forego further adventure, and bide by his English hearth, is the exception proving the rule. But critics and reviewers to the contrary, these writers and their immediate successors - among them Birkbeck, Fearon, Melish, Vaux and Welby - all have left useful, if not invariably appetizing, records.
